Executive travel stress: Perils of the road warrior

DeFrank, Richard S; Konopaske, Robert; Ivancevich, John M

Academy of Management Executive v14n2 PP: 58-71 May 2000 ISSN:

1079-5545 JRNL CODE: AEX

WORD COUNT: 8845

ABSTRACT: An important but rarely studied organizational activity is executive travel, a process that may be even more significant in this era of globalization, mergers, nation-state economic development and growth, and free-market strategic alliance building. Executive travel and the stress it may create is also a process that can cause emotional upset, physical illness, decreased performance and problems in achieving company objectives. This paper reviews the concept of travel stress among business executives. It offers both organizational and individual interventions for preventing and coping with the kinds of problems that often result from traveling on business domestically and internationally.

ABSTRACT: OnStar is a communication service that uses global positioning system satellite technology and a hands-free, voice-activated cellular phone to link the driver and the vehicle with the OnStar Center, where Advisors provide real-time, person-to-person help 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. By leveraging certain resources available to GM at the time, the company recognized, and seized upon, an opportunity to make sophisticated technology a useful, everyday tool for customers. This solution has also helped improve the personal nature of its customer/company relations. Main features of the service are listed.

Electronic communications: A necessity for local agencies

Henry, J Marilyn

Journal of Housing & Community Development v56n2 PP: 15-28 Mar/Apr 1999

ISSN: 0272-7374 JRNLCODE: JHO

WORD COUNT: 5817

ABSTRACT: The age of electronic communications is upon us, and housing and community development agencies have been thrust into the computer age. Now a standard part of almost every American business, computer systems and work stations are finding their way into almost every aspect of local authority operations. The Department of Housing and Urban Development began to require housing agencies to enter the world of electronic reporting in 1995. In June of that year HUD set forth special requirements for housing agencies on the electronic reporting of family data contained on the Forms HUD-50058 and HUD 50058-FSS. The requirements for electronic communications are affecting internal HUD operations, as well as those of local housing and community development agencies. HUD has established a number of storefront offices that rely on computer technology to maintain contact with HUD headquarters in Washington, D.C.

Psychology, economics, and settlement: A new look at the role of the lawyer
Korobkin, Russell; Guthrie, Chris
Texas Law Review v76n1 PP: 77-141 Nov 1997 ISSN: 0040-4411 JRNL CODE:
TRX
WORD COUNT: 35010

ABSTRACT: Approximately 90% to 95% or more of civil lawsuits not dismissed by courts in the early stages of litigation settle short of trial. The traditional law and economics model of litigation suggests that this is readily predictable. This model assumes that litigants seek to maximize their wealth through the legal system, and that they pursue this goal in a consistent, rational way. But the model's basic assumptions of wealth maximization and completely rational behavior ring hollow in the ears of lawyers who have observed the behavior of litigants. The model's assumptions are also undermined by a growing body of empirical evidence demonstrating that litigants often make decisions in ways that depart from these paradigms. A paper provides experimental evidence supportive of the hypothesis that lawyers as a class share an analytical orientation to decision-making that can facilitate a higher rate of settlement than behavioral scientists would expect litigants to negotiate on their own.

Making technology matter: The fuel to win the race to the 21st century
Oleson, Douglas E
Vital Speeches of the Day v63n10 PP: 313-316 Mar 1, 1997 ISSN:
0042-742X JRNL CODE: VSP
WORD COUNT: 3474

ABSTRACT: Technology is the fuel many are looking at to help win the race to the 21st century. At the Battelle company, one step that is taken toward operating in the current highly dynamic and unpredictable atmosphere is to pull together top company technology and industry experts and have them develop a business and technology scenario for the next 5 to 15 years. Two years ago, this process was formalized and the decision made to share Battelle's technology forecasts with the rest of the world. Since then, Battelle has made formal forecasts in 3 areas: the key market drivers of the next decade; what the 10 hottest technologies of the next decade will be; and, the 10 innovative products that will result from these technologies. Some of those top 10 products include pharmaceutical products derived from genetic research, powerful personal computers capable of wireless transmission, and multi-fuel automobiles. Despite all the predictions, however, there is only one prediction that can be guaranteed. That is that market and technology forces will continue to transform industry, and everyone will have to keep up with them in order to succeed.

Technology with a human touch: The top 10 innovative products for 2006

Olesen, Douglas E

Executive Speeches v11n1 PP: 13-16 Aug/Sep 1996 ISSN: 0888-4110

JRNL CODE: EXS

WORD COUNT: 2772

ABSTRACT: Earlier this year, Battelle's leading scientists and engineers put together a list of what will be the most important and most successful technology-based products for the year 2006. Pharmaceutical treatments that will come from all the genetic research going on around the world will treat a host of ills from allergies to AIDS. The personalized computer will be able to send and receive wireless data, recognize voice commands, and include a variety of security and service tools tailored to individual needs. In 10 years, cars will have to meet even stricter regulations for emissions and efficiency. To do that, it will run on a combination of various fuels, like reformulated gasoline, electricity and compressed natural gas.

Fairmont Hotels' turnaround strategy

Umbreit, W Terry

Cornell Hotel & Restaurant Administration Quarterly v37n4 PP: 50-57 Aug 1996 ISSN: 0010-8804 JRNL CODE: CHR

WORD COUNT: 4090

ABSTRACT: In 1994, a wealthy investor purchased controlling interest in Fairmont Hotels, but in 1991 there was no guarantee the 5-property chain would even be in operation by 1994. The year 1991 began Fairmont's turnaround when the owners, the Swig family, hired Robert Small, most recently of Walt Disney World hotels, to run the company. Small focused on a top-line strategy of boosting occupancy and market share at the expense of average rate. He wooed travel -industry suppliers by promising performance to keep clients happy. Since corporate customers were also feeling the effects of recession, Small set rates and policies to meet their needs. to fill empty rooms in slow times he implemented price promotions for leisure travelers. To ensure that the company deliver on its promises, Small and his team restructured marketing and human-resources departments. Overhead was cut by trimming accounting and other back-office functions. The result was a steady increase in occupancy with no substantial loss in revenue per available room. Subsequent economic recovery allowed Fairmont to increase rates until it attracted the buyer's attention.

ABSTRACT: Most business executives are more careless about personal security than they are about corporate security. Since 1975, Control Risks Group, an international security risk-analysis firm, has been called upon in several hundred cases of kidnapping and extortion to obtain the release of corporate employees illegally detained by foreign governments, guerrillas or criminal organizations. Twelve basic travel safety trips, recommended by Control Risks Group and the State Department, are presented.

That's the craziest thing I ever heard
Marchetti, Michele
Sales & Marketing Management v147n11 PP: 76-82 Nov 1995 ISSN: 0163-7517
JRNL CODE: SAL
WORD COUNT: 1929

ABSTRACT: Sales presentations can be as dry as a much-anticipated first kiss. Before a presentation, L. Bryant Barry, director of sales for the Illinois-based animal-health division of Sandoz Agro Inc., visits the company and spends some time with the prospect's key salesperson. Besides getting background on the company, meeting with the rep gives Barry an edge: if salespeople attend the presentation - as they often do - Barry has a friend in the audience to call on for verbal confirmation or a simple nod of the head. This crucial preparatory step - researching the prospect - will take salespeople one step closer to closing the sale.

Asset management: Here to stay
Feldman, Deborah S
Cornell Hotel & Restaurant Administration Quarterly v36n5 PP: 36-51 Oct 1995 ISSN: 0010-8804 JRNL CODE: CHR
WORD COUNT: 9906

ABSTRACT: Asset management came to prominence in the late 1980s when ownership of a hotel became too complex for many owners and when it became clear to some owners that management companies were not responsible for the long-term appreciation of the property. In essence, the asset manager has the responsibility of seeing that the owner's investment goals are met in terms of cash flow and appreciation of the asset. This study examines the asset-management function from the point of view of owners, operators, and the asset managers themselves. The key to a successful relationship among the owner, operator, and asset manager appears to be open communication, trust, and a mutual understanding of each party's goals.

Factors influencing intentions to retire: An empirical test of theoretical propositions

ABSTRACT: In light of significant changes over the past decade in the nature of the workforce, the workplace, and retirement itself, an examination is presented of the factors that predispose employees to retire. The study uses a sample of older workers who had attended pre-retirement planning sessions open to employees over age 45. Results suggest that employment status of spouse (rather than marital status per se), continuous years of service (rather than salary), the physical demands of the job (rather than overall health), and certainty about plans for retirement (rather than the content of those plans) are significantly related to intentions to retire.

State of the industry - Part 1: How planners do their jobs

Anonymous

Successful Meetings Special Report PP: 5-21 Dec 1994 ISSN: 0148-4052

JRNL CODE: SMM

WORD COUNT: 4841

ABSTRACT: Meeting planners' tactics vary from hard-nosed to laying all the cards on the table. Most planners operate in the middle ground, striving for a perfect balance. Because airline travel is not considered particularly negotiable, most planners put their time and energy into hotel negotiations. For many meeting planners, the use of the Saturday-night stayover has the double advantage of lowering airfares and minimizing time away from the office. Increasingly, planners are using evaluations to measure their professional success. To stop declining attendance, planners have suggested cutting the length of the meeting, being more creative, sending marketing materials, promoting meetings better and finding new ways to reach and inform prospective attendees.

Proposals and guidelines for the carriage of elderly and disabled persons by air

ABSTRACT: This article examines the international and national regulatory measures relating to the carriage of elderly and disabled persons by air that have been adopted, and recommends proposals and guidelines that air carriers and airport administrations throughout the world could follow, so that such carriage can be facilitated. International responses to the status of the disabled passenger in air transport show a trend that seeks the support of all authorities concerned to provide more facilities for this category of passenger.

ABSTRACT: The Environmental Health Annual Report 1992/93, published in the September 1994 issue of Environmental Health, and the Egg Marketing Inspectorate: Annual Report 1993-1994, are examined. Figures in the Environmental Health Annual Report indicate a general improvement in the condition of food premises. Figures gathered from local authorities on food complaints continued to show that, although proportionally down on last year, food containing extraneous matter was a major source of public grievance. A description of the work of the Egg Marketing Inspectorate is provided. The Egg Marketing Inspectorate is responsible for enforcement of EC Regulations at all points in the marketing chain.

When vacations turn sour, travel agents need E&O insurance

Kettner, Ronald; Anolik, Alexander

American Agent & Broker v66n10 PP: 67-68 Oct 1994 ISSN: 0002-7200

JRNL CODE: AGB

WORD COUNT: 1369

ABSTRACT: Travel agents are exposed to claims for their negligent acts and omissions, specifically their failure to act as a reasonably prudent travel agent. An appropriately worded errors and omissions (E&O) liability insurance policy can protect travel agents from such claims. Travel agents can be held liable if a customer alleges that accommodations were unsatisfactory or that a tour operator did not provide all the features that were promised. If travel agents were aware of, or with reasonable diligence could have discovered, the existence of unsatisfactory or dangerous conditions, they could be held accountable. Generally, coverage for bodily injury is excluded under most E&O policies; however, bodily injury that arises from a travel agent's negligent acts, errors or omissions in the performance of duties could be covered. An E&O policy will also provide a travel agent with defense against claims made for consequential damages.

Catalog Age v11n9 PP: 125-126 Sep 1994 ISSN: 0740-3119 JRNL CODE: CTA

WORD COUNT: 1142

ABSTRACT: Mountain Travel -Sobek's 1994 Adventure Annual includes an

"Adventure Disc" which customers can play on their photo CD player or computer-based CD-ROM drive. The front cover of the catalog, the 1994 Silver Award winner for consumer specialty, features a dramatic photograph of the north face of Taweche in the Himalayan Mountains and the miniscule figure of a trekker dwarfed by the mountain. The catalog offers mountain treks in remote places, rafting trips on roaring rapids, and walking safaris in big game country. The catalog is divided into sections according to destination. Catalog copy is comprehensive and authoritative. It arms readers with all the information they will need to make a buying decision right up front. The company also clearly outlines its trip-grading system to help readers choose the right trip for their physical condition. The company's Independent Travel Desk can assist customers in narrowing down the options or help them plan a private trip.

ABSTRACT: Not visiting remote locations in foreign countries may prove to be an expensive omission. Many savvy international business travelers never venture out of the major cities where their customers' offices are located, but others have been finding that getting out to the plant sites provides new opportunities for sales, reveals how overseas operations actually operate, and helps ensure that a foreign business venture has a better shot at success. Remote international trips are expensive and time consuming, while language difficulties and safety concerns are further barriers. However, with time, advance planning and a healthy dose of courage, managers find that off road travel delivers substantial benefits.

Property in land

ABSTRACT: The basic issues of land ownership are examined using both theoretical perspectives, such as the rational-actor model, and historical evidence on the evolution of land institutions, including case studies of several land regimes. Several positive and normative propositions about the evolution of land regimes are presented. The most general of the positive propositions, the efficiency thesis, asserts that land rules within a close-knit group evolve so as to minimize its members' costs. The close-knit group tends to create, through custom and law, a cost-minimizing land regime that adaptively responds to changes in risk, technology, demand, and other economic conditions. In doing so, the group opportunistically mixes private, public, and open-access lands. The case studies used also demonstrate that anthropology and history can enrich legal analysis of property rights in land.

Wide Horizons: Travel and Tourism in the Coming Decades

Tarlow, Peter E.; Muehsam, Mitchell J.

Futurist v26n5 PP: 28-32 Sep/Oct 1992 ISSN: 0016-3317 JRNL CODE: FUS

WORD COUNT: 2597

ABSTRACT: Travel and tourism may be the world's largest industry, with about $2 trillion in annual travel-related sales around the world for business, recreation, and family life. A number of phenomena have promoted mass travel, including discount air fares, the building of superhighways, the growth of the motel industry, and the abolishment of many international visas. Factors that are affecting and are likely to impact the future of the tourism industry include: 1. advances in communications and robotics, 2. advances in personal computers, which allow travelers to book, ticket, and purchase travel arrangements, 3. increased competition among the airline, train, and automotive travel industries, 4. smaller households, and 5. aging populations. These factors are likely to produce results such as greater service to travelers, greater response by the industry to meet the needs of various segments of the market, a renaissance of health spas and wellness centers, and an increase in the number of ecotourists - vacationers seeking "natural vacations" and secluded places.

Safety and Health Experience of Pilots and Flight Attendants

Reardon, Jack

Monthly Labor Review v115n4 PP: 18-24 Apr 1992 ISSN: 0098-1818

JRNL CODE: MLR

WORD COUNT: 3977

ABSTRACT: The occupational injury and illness rate as well as the extent and characteristics of the injuries and illnesses to airline pilots and flight attendants could be affected by structural changes occurring in the airline industry. The new, low-cost entrants could put pressure on management to reduce costs by abrogating work rules and increasing speedup, thereby resulting in more injuries and illnesses. In 1988, the injury and illness rate per 100 full-time workers for airline workers was 13.0%, compared with the private sector average of 8.6%, an indication of the hazardous nature of the air transportation industry. The preponderant source of injury and illness for pilots and flight attendants is "vehicles", constituting 32% of total injuries and illnesses. A 2nd principal source for flight attendants is air pressure, accounting for 20% of that job's case total. The 2nd most common source of injury and illness for pilots is contact with working surfaces.

State Labor Legislation Enacted in 1991

Nelson, Richard R.

Monthly Labor Review v115n1 PP: 40-55 Jan 1992 ISSN: 0098-1818

JRNL CODE: MLR

WORD COUNT: 20541

ABSTRACT: State legislation enacted in 1991 covered several different aspects of employment standards. Minimum wage protection was one of the most active issues in 1991. Rates increased under federal law and in 29 states and 3 jurisdictions as a result of new laws, wage orders, administrative actions, or as provided for in prior legislation. Parental leave continued to be a subject of considerable legislative attention. New laws, which permit either parent to take an unpaid leave of absence for the birth or adoption of a child, or to care for a seriously ill child, parent or spouse, were enacted for both the private and public sector in California, Hawaii, and Oregon, and for state employees in Florida. Twenty-nine states enacted legislation addressing one or more forms of employment discrimination. One or more laws dealing with various aspects of worker safety and health were enacted in 24 states and Puerto Rico.

Lodging Hospitality v47n9 PP: 49-50 Sep 1991 ISSN: 0148-0766

ABSTRACT: Travelodge International's British parent company has reorganized and renamed its group of hospitality companies. Now, all of the Forte PLC's companies are rebranding to the Forte name. According to Travelodge International's new president and chief executive officer, Joseph McInerney, the rebranding to the Forte name may eventually extend to properties in the US, but before that happens, the company must determine what is Travelodge and what is its position in the eyes of the consumer. A major research project has been commissioned to find that out. Already, management knows that all Travelodge properties fall into one of 2 distinct, but separate segments: economy and budget. Challenges facing McInerney and the chain include building occupancies and rates, providing solid price-value relationships for consumers, and expanding the system.

Taking the Mystery Out of Mystery Shopping

ABSTRACT: Mystery shopping is an anonymous audit of customer service or sales prowess. Many market research firms provide mystery-shopping services. Through a network of evaluators, they provide an outside, unbiased opinion of a staff, as well as detailed, documented reports about their findings. Mystery shopping serves a variety of purposes, such as: 1. helping a firm learn more about customer needs, 2. increasing employee performance and morale, 3. providing information about customizing training programs, and 4. reinforcing general standards of employee behavior. A crucial element of mystery shopping is sharing the results with the employees who have been "shopped." The program should not be punitive, and the staff should know the shopping is being used to help rather than hurt them.

TEXT:

EuroBound Tours has designed a seven-night Alpine Hiking Adventure for outdoor lovers who want to hike the Swiss Alps by day and relax in European comfort at world-class hotels by night.

Created for experienced hikers of intermediate level and above, and those in good physical condition, the package enables the independent adventurer to follow a well-marked map to view stunning mountain vistas, carpets of wildflowers, waterfalls and glacial lakes.

Hikers travel independently at their own pace as they follow a regional map supplied with information kits. The kits, provided upon registration, also contain area descriptions and trail suggestions. Packed lunches can be ordered the night before and paid for locally.

ABSTRACT:

Whether sky high (in a helicopter) or deep down (in the blue sea), romance abounds on the islands In Hawaii, romance is in the air--and on land and sea, too. Guided tours, sunset cruises, kayak adventures, helicopter tours and horseback rides all exert magnetic appeal. Following is a sampling of romantic activities in the islands. Big Island

ABSTRACT: The third annual TransWorld Snowboarding Business/National Ski Areas Association survey reveals that snowboards are growing more popular than skis among young people and accounted for 22.4 percent of ski resort visitors in 1997-98, a figure expected to reach 34.8 percent within five years. Fifty-nine percent of the newcomers on snowboards were teenagers who had never been skiing; another 26 percent of teens 'crossed over' from skiing. The corresponding figures for people over 20 are 4 and 12 percent. Resorts are aggressively courting the new customers, offering snowboard rentals, repairs, lessons and events. Some are opening trails designed specifically for snowboarding, and many have snowboard shops. Over 75 percent of ski areas say snowboarding is crucial to their bottom line.

ABSTRACT: More hospitality firms are considering offering a 100%, unconditional-guarantee policy. The key to the successful implementation of an unconditional-guarantee program is proper employee training. Two departments are essential for the 100% guarantee policy, namely, housekeeping and maintenance. Empowerment also plays a crucial role. However, industry in general is still hesitant to make the unconditional-guarantee policy a standard, since the proper mix of commitment, training, monitoring and empowerment needed for such a policy is hard to achieve.

ABSTRACT: The recession in the lodging industry from 1986 to 1991 might have totally affected San Francisco, CA-based Fairmont Hotels were it not for the leadership capability of Robert I. Small. Following his appointment as CEO in 1991, Small worked towards increasing income by increasing occupancy levels to exceed the market. He assessed the operations of the five-hotel chain and proceeded with a restructuring that included downsizing and replacing employees. He then changed the arrogant image of the hotel by reaching out to potential clients and forming partnerships.

ABSTRACT: Business travelers are frequently unconcerned about the danger of traveling in foreign countries, but they may make themselves targets for crime by dressing well, using limousines, and paying for items with US dollars. Tips for enhancing traveler safety include traveling with a companion, staying on main roads when leaving the airport, using taxis rather than limousines, and registering with the US embassy after entering a foreign country. Additional techniques for improving safety are provided.

ABSTRACT: Hotel operators, asset managers and owners are still at odds over what constitutes the responsibilities of each party. Because asset management is still a relatively new field, becoming popular only in the mid-1980s, a smooth relationship among the three has not yet come into fruition. Nevertheless, a friendly and beneficial interaction can be devised through open communication, trust and a mutual understanding of the goals of each entity.

ABSTRACT: It is important for hotels that are interested in joining a franchise to find out the services that are available to them from franchise headquarters. Information about employee training, marketing and reservations system implementation should be furnished. A franchise representative should assist the new franchisee in setting goals and objectives and time frames for these goals and objectives to be realized. Choice Hotels' Clarion franchise operation provides these services.

The brochure lists the range of room rates as published by each property, rather than the rates offered by Classic. Classic's latest rates can be obtained over the telephone by travel agents. Classic is offering 32% fewer hotels in 1994, and has dropped those that either did not meet the company's standards or were not high in demand.

ABSTRACT: The interaction between hotel staff and meeting planners is a critical aspect in ensuring the success of service delivery and profitability of hotels in the changing economic environment. Communication, organization, implementation, initiative, developing relationships and crisis management are identified as the integral elements of such interaction. Several strategies which hotels can utilize in the resolution of the negative aspects of service management are also presented and its implications to the hospitality industry are discussed.

ONCE you've donned the white terrycloth robe and matching scuffs, you are like everyone else, nondescript, in the standard uniform of the democratic imperative of a spa - the word spa cognoscente Judith Muller tells us is an acronym derived from the Latin Sanitas Per Aqua - health from water. Here, there is no distinction of status, age, language, physical condition, ethnic origin or level of sophistication, we soon discover.

THE NaturMed Carbona Hotel Spa, located in the bucolic town of Heviz, with a lake of its own bordering on the famous Lake Balaton, has Roman-like thermal baths and state of the arts therapeutic treatments that rank it among the most internationally acclaimed European resorts for rejuvenation of body and soul according to Muller.

A team of Arab lawyers, who are members of the Committee for the Defense of the Guantanamo POWs and Detainees, will leave for the United States on 13 October 2002. The purpose of this trip is to defend those prisoners and ask the US Government to apply the Third Geneva Convention of 1949 on POWs and hand them over to their countries.

The lawyers will assemble in Dubai to discuss practical steps for defending the prisoners. The lawyers were scheduled to leave for the United States this week. But they have postponed their trip for reasons that have to do with getting more powers of attorney from the families of prisoners and completing discussions on the steps and procedures to defend them before US courts.

When photographer Anthony Cullen heard the clank of glass on porcelain, he didn't need to examine the contents of the toilet bowl between his legs. He instinctively knew he had just passed the marble he had swallowed as a five-year-old; the small coloured sphere - "I think it was a bluey" - had lodged in his colon for 22 years. His nonchalance was understandable. Having flushed 400 pints of coffee and vinegar solution around his large intestine through 10 enemas, and taken 100 herbal laxatives, he had become hardened to extraordinary sights. He had already excreted yards of long stringy mucus "with a strange yellow glaze", several hard black pellets and numerous pieces of undigested rump steak. Like an iceberg breaking away from a glacier, the marble was simply the latest object to drop off the furred up wall of his colon.

Within 30 minutes it had become a burning topic of conversation among guests at The Spa resort on the Thai island of Koh Samui. Most listened, nodded earnestly and smiled, a flicker of mutual support, before describing their own bowel movements in unnervingly graphic detail. It was just another day at the tropical health farm where conversations that would be deemed unpleasant, if not obscene, in any place outside a gastro-intestinal ward, are mere idle chit-chat among the sun-soaked clientele.

Iran's President Khatami has said: "We do not want a Taleban-style security. In fact, we consider the Taleban's behaviour and school of thought as a blow to the image of Islam." Speaking at a news conference on 1 September, referring to the recent spate of newspaper closures and arrests, he said: "Anyone who moves outside the constitution's framework has to be punished. This rule applies to all individuals, newspapers or state officials. However, with regards to the press, the appropriate legal action must be taken within the constitution's framework, in the form of a public court and in presence of a jury". It's the time of year when mountains don their snowy cloaks and acquire a sombre and serene look. It is also the time when virgin snow gleams with skiers sliding the mountain slopes. For high mountain thrills, nothing can surpass the joy of skiing. And for that heady feeling in the highlands, head for Gulmarg, the 'Switzerland of Asia' in Kashmir, Manali and Narkanda in Himachal Pradesh or Auli in Uttar Pradesh. The options are open till mid-March. Let's take a closer look at these options.

The marketing director of Tzabar, Gabi Slov, puts the ski tourism market in Israel at about $35 million a year. Most packages include equipment rental, insurance, lift fees, meals and apres-ski activities. Resorts located at high altitudes, usually opening in December, well before other locations, offer good skiing through April. February is the snowiest month, and thus also the most popular and expensive.

The resorts that are suited to families with children and teenagers offer, in addition to skiing, a wide range of activities. France's Val D'isere resort, for example, just opened a village for children ages 3 to 13 that provides activities in an indoor hall as well as on the open slopes, including ski lessons.

Iraq's Tariq Aziz rejects "tendentious, evil" British proposal on sanctions
BBC MONITORING INTERNATIONAL REPORTS

June 29, 1999

JOURNAL CODE: WBMS LANGUAGE: English RECORD TYPE: FULLTEXT

Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz has said that Iraq rejects "part and parcel" the British draft resolution on partially suspending UN sanctions. In a TV interview on 28th June, Aziz described the resolution as "fabricated and misleading", saying that it was aimed not at any humanitarian goal, but at imposing new restrictions and commitments on Iraq which would last for even longer than the original sanctions resolution. In the course of the interview, which was conducted via satellite from Baghdad, by Sami Haddad in London, Aziz discussed several other issues, including: UN weapons inspection teams and weapons of mass destruction in the Middle East; The Iraqi opposition and political system; Security within Iraq and relations with Iran; Iraq's view of the recent Saudi-Iranian rapprochement. The following is the text of the interview broadcast by Qatari Al-Jazeera satellite TV on 28th June; subheadings inserted editorially:

(Haddad) Dear viewers, welcome to a new episode of the More than One Opinion programme. Since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait in August 1990 and up until now, the UN Security Council has issued scores of resolutions concerning Iraq. Now, eight years after the end of the war, the UN Security Council is discussing several draft resolutions that may lead to the gradual lifting of the embargo and the sanctions. One of the most significant of these draft resolutions is one proposed by the United Kingdom and the Netherlands. This draft resolution calls for the sanctions to be suspended for 120 days, after which an assessment will be made of Iraq's abidance by the requirements related to the full removal of prohibited weapons. This condition is a common element also in the Russian and French proposal.

MORRISTOWN, N.J., June 25 /PRNewswire/ -- Halfway to the biggest New Year's party in a thousand years, cruise lines still have plenty of space available for special Millennium Cruises, according to CruiseReports, the monthly cruise value rating newsletter.

CruiseReports surveyed all the major cruise lines and found 70 ships ready to accommodate more passengers on special Millennium sailings. The full list, including departure dates and ports, length of cruises, itineraries and lowest published prices per person are listed in the June 1999 issue of the newsletter. It includes cruises ranging from four to 26 nights in virtually every part of the globe on everything from the largest cruise liner in the world to some of the smallest. Prices, too, run the gamut from $1,148 up to more than $30,000 per person.
